Website Accessibility Assessment

Landing Page

As previously discussed, the primary goal is to ensure that the photos used for the assessment are clear. A great website for assessing the role of photos is <https://www.wave.com>.

Photos of the same kind is commonly on the landing page. One should be able to identify the content, especially when it is a mobile device, as an alt, it takes a great job of making it look like it can be identified by the browser.

Another website that should be used to check the contrast of the writing colours, is <https://www.wave.com>. It is especially important for people with Dyslexia, their systems and color blindness to be able to read and write with enough contrast with the writing you can also check what you expect to be the same with different types of color blindness. I have included some examples in the next slide. Enjoy to use it!

As I have not covered our current goals, you should always get a good idea, to check it, to know the current accessibility and how some of the sites using against our guidelines can be better than get a good idea.

Navigation

Decorative

Accessibility

Analytics

As stated, accessibility can affect the success rate and the general performance of a website. I have used a screen capture tool (Lightshot) to assess the performance of the website, which I have provided in the coming slides.

The other tool used is Wave, the accessibility tool. It is found on slide 10. This tool allows you to see which have the most problems, structure elements and errors.

The content that I have found using that tool will be provided to you with visual disabilities in the next slide. This includes Dyslexia, Turned colour, colour blindness and more. Some examples are shown on slide 11.

Lightshot

Wave

The report gives into detail about each page. Performance, accessibility, Best Practice, SEO and Meta. Once we have finished editing the website, we will be able to bring all the information in, it will be available in the report. It will be available in the report before we start the website.

Wave

Enjoy! Develops change, data and information.

Accessibility

Conclusion

After the design, have understood that they are a diverse company, is infinity and gender are diverse, in marketing they are pioneering in the background of their photos, it looks very from their actual message with who they are and what they do.

"What are primary reasons to have their design that means, although it's important, again it drives away from the actual company and the opportunity for business."

"The main reason to create that the company has given, perhaps we can have created all it could make on the website?"

"The colors were used to all over the place, distracting from their core colour scheme. Also putting things in boxes very hard to read."

It is to see their photos of their topics along something for clarity and it grounds them more as a company.

Accenture

Accenture

"Accenture plc is an Irish-American professional services company based in Dublin, specialising in information technology services and consulting. It became a public-listed company, a regional member of the Euronext 100 in 2021."

"What's a feature that makes it?"
Accenture's strategy and IT consulting provides business strategy, technology strategy, operations strategy, systems, as well as technology, business and management consulting services. Accenture Hong Kong, digital and innovation provides digital marketing, analytics and mobility services."
